THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT.—The official announcement of the ratification of the Constitutional Amendment (14th article) by three-fourths of the States will generally be received with indifference. There is nothing in it to excite over, or to give one a new feeling of contentment. From the beginning it was a foregone conclusion—a "put up job" as the police detectives would say. Like Napoleon's submission of political questions to the popular vote, every care was taken that the vote should be just right; and there were the potential methods, some exercised and others in reserve, for correcting any defections from the line of policy marked out at Washington. Only one answer, "Yes," was audible at the Capitol. Texas, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky all voted "No" in 1866 or '67, but Congress would not take "No" for an answer. Ohio and New Jersey having ratified the amendment in 1866, rescinded their action next year; but Congress would not admit that any State had the power to say anything but "Yes" on the question, and refused to let those States change their vote, although at the time application was made for that privilege, three-fourths of the States had not voted upon the amendment, and the matter was still an open one, and the reversal of the vote of any State was perfectly proper. The States of Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina, which had shouted "No" very loudly, were made to utter "Yes" in the meekest of whispers by means of a little judicious pressure on the thorax, administered by martial thumb and fingers. Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana and Alabama did not make the mistake of going counter to the imperial will, but when the time came for putting the question, murmured "Yes" as promptly as a bride at the altar.

It is not worth anybody's while, in these busy times, to go back and show what a world of violence and fraud has been employed in compassing the passage of this amendment. The thing is done, and "there's an end on't." The fourteenth article is now declared to be a part of the Constitution of the United States.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

"THE OLD WOMAN."—Once she was "Mother," and it was "Mother, I'm hungry," "Mother, mend my jacket," "Mother, put up my dinner," and "Mother," with her loving hands would spread the bread and butter, and stow away the luncheon and sew on the great patch, her heart brimming with affection for the imperious little curly pate that made her so many steps and nearly distracted her with his boisterous mirth.

Now she is the "old woman," but she did not think it would ever come to that. She looked on through the future years and saw her boy to manhood grown; and he stood transfixed in the light of her own beautiful love. Never was there a more noble son than he—honored of the world, and the staff of her declining years.

Aye, he was her support even then, but she did not know it. She never realized that it was her little boy that gave her strength for daily toil—that this slender form was all that upheld her over the brink of a dark despair. She only knew how she loved the child, and felt that amid the mists of age his love would bear her gently through its infirmities to the dark land leading to the life beyond.

But the son has forgotten the mother's tender ministrations now. Adrift from the moorings of home, he is cold, selfish, heartless and "Mother has no sacred meaning to the prodigal. She is "the old woman," wrinkled, gray, lame and blind.

Pity her, O grave, and dry those tears that roll down her furrowed cheeks.

THE PEST OF FLIES—A HARD STORY.—We heard a story yesterday, about the insects known as June flies, which are seen in myriads near the river, or wherever there is a body of water. Last Saturday night these flies came from the river in countless numbers, and attracted by the lamp at the office of the Peoria bridge, flew to that locality, and fell dead there by millions, until a space three feet long, and as many wide, was piled with them to the height of the door knob, about three feet from the floor. On Sunday morning, the bridge-tenders procured wheelbarrows and carted away fifteen barrows full of the mass of dead insects, and threw them into the river. As the flies died and fell, they became matted together, until a barrow full made a good load.—We refused to believe this story when told, but were solemnly assured by six gentlemen who were witnesses, that it is a fact. The insects flew in huge swarms, until the mass of dead ones was formed, which occupied about an hour and a half, or between nine and half past ten at night. Those of our readers who refuse to believe the story are referred to the bridge-tenders and employees for verification. Another story, much more probable, is told of some person of genius, who opened a street lamp in the lower part of the city, that same evening, and in a short time the lamp was nearly filled with the insects, attracted thither by the light.—Peoria Transcript.

SUMMER JOTTINGS.—Dresses of pine apple cloth—a fine material made from the fibres of the pine apple—are both pretty and fashionable.

Fichus are very pretty, and universally worn. They display a slender figure to fine advantage. The sailor's collar, pointed over the shoulders, is much in vogue among young ladies.

It is now an understood fact that a plain water fall is no longer fashionable.

Entire suits of white pique are much in vogue among young ladies.

A fancy for India goods is one of the caprices of the summer.

SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO.
The value of this GUANO is now so well known and appreciated, that it does not require further commendation from us.
The Company owns the Guano Islands, and other sources of supply from which its raw material is drawn. Hence, this Guano, possessing such high excellence, can be brought into market at a price not exceeding that of the ordinary Super-Phosphates of Lime.
The large capital invested by this Company affords the surest guarantee of the continued excellence of their fertilizer, as the safety of their capital depends upon continued and permanent business.
Experience has shown that this Guano ripens the Wheat crop from five to six days earlier than the Super-Phosphates.
It is the policy and purpose of the Company to furnish the best fertilizer that enterprise and capital, aided by the best scientific ability, can bring into market, at the lowest possible cost to consumers.
